READY TO DEDICATE SHAFT

Gen. Huidekoper Has Completed Plans for Ceremonies on September. About Five Thousand Old Soldiers Expected.

All arrangements for the dedication of the Pennsylvania monument have been completed and were made public Tuesday when General Henry S. Huidekoper, chairman of the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Commission, notified Governor Stuart that preparations were perfected for the dedication.

As the ceremony of dedication is distinctively a State affair, General Huidekoper says it was only intended to have Pennsylvania soldiers present with a few distinguished officers of the Civil War, who are living in different sections of the country, and this conclusion will be carried out as nearly as possible.

General Huidekoper was the recipient Tuesday of a letter from General Daniel E. Sickles, of New York, who commanded the Third corps at Gettysburg and had a leg shot off at the Trostle farm, not far from the site of the memorial, saying he would join his old comrades at the dedicatory exercises.

Captain George F. Baer, president of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad, who commanded a Pennsylvania regiment in the Civil War, and Major General D. McMurtrie Gregg, former auditor general of this State, and noted as one of Sheridan's cavalry leaders, and the only one living of thirty four officers whose names are cut in the granite monument, have informed General Huidekoper they will be with the contingent of comrades.

The Pilgrims of the Union League, which had made a practice of visiting Gettysburg yearly since its organization, will be here in command of Chief Commander Edward T. Stotesbury. The vice commander of the Pilgrims is George P. Morgan, the secretary of the Gettysburg Battlefield Memorial Commission.

The commission, in order to make it as comfortable as possible for old soldiers and their wives, who will be present, has had built a grandstand at the monument, with a seating capacity of 5000. The band of the Soldiers' Orphans' Industrial School, in Franklin County, has been engaged. General Huidekoper will present the monument in behalf of the commission and Governor Stuart, who will be present with his staff in full uniform, will accept it for the State.

Arrangement for the transportation of all the Pennsylvania veterans who fought in the battle of Gettysburg, has been completed by the commissioners. It is expected that more than 6000 veterans will be here.

ROMANCE CULMINATED

Rev. J. Luther Sieber wedded in Nova Scotia to Miss Hilda M. M. Millen. Rev. Sieber is a Son of Dr. L. L. Sieber.

An account of the marriage of Rev. Sieber, graduate of Gettysburg College class of 1900, and a son of Rev. L. L. Sieber, of West Middle street, given in The New Haven Palladium says: when the Rev. J. Luther Sieber pastor of the First Lutheran church of this city, saved Miss Hilda M. Millen, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, from drowning, after a boat in which she was sailing had capsized in a lake near that place, nearly two years ago, a romance began which culminated Wednesday last with the marriage of the couple in Yarmouth.

When cupid shot his first dart two years ago, Mr. Sieber was spending his vacation near Yarmouth. One day while out on the lake, the boat in which Miss Millen was sailing upset in a sudden squall, with the greatest difficulty the pastor saved her life, although at a risk of losing his own.

The marriage took place at noon in Saint John's Presbyterian Church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. A. M. Hill, pastor of the church. The bride had as her maid of honor Miss Margaret K. Cameron, of Yarmouth, Miss Frieda Wyman, of Yarmouth, and Miss Genevieve Crosby, of Greenwich, cousins of the bride were bridesmaids.

The groom was accompanied by his brother, Dr. Paul Sieber, of Johns Hopkins University as best man, and Dr. Homer B. Millen, of New Haven, brother of the bride, Charles Douglass Robbins, of McGill University, Carl Edward Brant, Jr., of New Haven, and George N. Kirk, of Yarmouth, were the ushers.

Mr. and Mrs. Sieber sailed this afternoon for Euston on the steamer Prince George. The bride wore a traveling suit of Catawba chiffon broad cloth, with beaver hat to match.

They will make their home in New Haven, where Rev. Mr. Sieber has been pastor of the First English church for the past eight years.

ABOUT ABE LINCOLN RAILS

Assistant Postmaster J. M. Reed, of Newville, found the following in a scrap book of date September 1860.

"Four rails, split by Abraham Lincoln, 30 years ago, were forwarded to Shippensburg by express a few days since. They were sent by M. W. Hamsher to David Spencer, Dr. Alex. Stewart, Dr. R. C. Hayes, Joseph H. Cressler and R. P. McClure."

The Shippensburg News of September 1st, 1860 says:

"On Tuesday morning last, Adams' Express Company brought to this place, from the former residence of the Hon. Abraham Lincoln, four of the identical rails split by 'Honest Old Abe,' and John Hanks, some thirty years ago, in Sangamon county, Illinois. They were sent by Mr. W. Hemmner, formerly of this vicinity, to David Spencer, Esq., of Orrstown, Dr. A. Stewart, Joseph H. Cressler, Dr. R. C. Hayes, and R. P. McClure, Esq., of this place. The effect upon the persons, Democrats and Republicans, who saw the rails, was electrical. Every one was eager to get a glance at the emblems of Mr. Lincoln's industry, and it was with the utmost difficulty that they were prevented from being carried off in the enthusiasm of the crowd who witnessed them. They are of black walnut and in a fine state of preservation."

Insurgent Leader Wins Senatorial
Nomination in Washington.

INSURGENTS SWEEP WASHINGTON STATE

Poindexter Wins Senate Fight by 40,000 Plurality.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 15.—In the insurgent storm that swept over the state of Washington Tuesday, the old guard of the Republican party lost at almost every point.

Miles Poindexter, of Spokane, an insurgent leader in the present house, was nominated for United States senator by 40,000 plurality, carrying every county in the state.

Two insurgents were nominated for congress, with possibilities of a third. President Taft made an effort two weeks ago, through Secretary Ballinger, to concentrate the opposition to Mr. Poindexter on one regular candidate. The president obtained the withdrawal of former Senator John L. Wilson, of Seattle, according to Mr. Wilson, but James M. Ashton, of Tacoma, and Thomas Burke, of Seattle, insisted on remaining in the race and dividing the regular vote.

The balloting shows that a concentration of the regulars would not have won.

Nearly all the candidates for the legislature are pledged to vote for the senatorial candidate receiving the highest vote, and there can be no fight over the election of Poindexter it is said.

2 YEARS FOR SUGAR MAN

Former Superintendent of Trust Must Also Pay a $5000 Fine.

New York, Sept. 15.—Ernest W. Gerbracht, former superintendent of the Williamsburg plant of the American Sugar Refining company, who, with Charles R. Helke, former secretary and treasurer of the company, was convicted last spring of conspiracy to defraud the government by the under weighing of sugar, was sentenced on Wednesday.

He was given two years in the federal penitentiary at Atlanta and fined $5000 by Judge Martin in the United States court. After imposing sentence Judge Martin granted a stay on appeal and fixed bail at $25,000.

Sentence on Helke, who has been called "the man higher up," is still pending.

The conviction of Helke and Gerbracht was in a large measure brought about by the testimony of Oliver Spitzer, former dock superintendent. Following his conviction and the serving of a part of his sentence at Atlanta he turned state's evidence. Spitzer was pardoned by President Taft.

DEFENCE SCORES IN CRIPPEN CASE

Expert Admits Failure to Determine Sex of Body.

FRAGMENTS SHOW LITTLE

Is Sure Mutilated Body Had Been Buried at Least Four Months—Tells of Old Scar.

London, Sept. 15.—The defense in the case of Dr. Hawley H. Crippen at the court inquiry now going on here scored a point when an expert pathologist called as a witness for the crown admitted having failed to determine whether the body found in the house at Hilldrop Crescent was that of a man or a woman.

The police have contended all along that evidence would show the body to have been that of a woman. In all likelihood Belle Elmore, the American actress, with whose murder Dr. Crippen is charged. The expert witness was professor Augustus J. Peffer, of the University of London.

He said that his examination had convinced him that the parts of a body found in the cellar of the Hilldrop Crescent home were severed by a hand skilled in surgery and directed by a mind that possessed a real knowledge of anatomy.

Identified Parts of Human Body. Professor Peffer described the examination which he had made of the body and then set forth his conclusions. The witness said he had identified pieces of flesh as belonging to various parts of the body, except the head, hands, forearms, feet and legs below the knees. He could say that the members found were undoubtedly from a human body. No bones were discovered.

The whole viscera was intact and the only wound was a cut in the upper part of the windpipe. Other parts were left undisturbed by the one who did the cutting, and the way in which the parts had been separated convinced the expert that whoever was guilty of the mutilation did his work with an exactness born of familiarity with the human body.

Professor Peffer said that the hair discovered included a short strand of fair texture wrapped up in a handkerchief of the size commonly used by men. The witness identified particularly a piece of flesh six by seven inches in size as coming from the abdominal wall and which bore a scar, which, in his opinion, was undoubtedly left by an incision from an operation.

The witness said that the scar was in a vertical direction and more than four inches long. It was old, and might have been on the body for many years. The condition of the organs recovered was healthy and in Professor Peffer's judgment indicated that they had belonged to a stoutish person in middle life.

The witness then made the statement that he had found no evidence as to the body being that of a man or woman. It had been buried not less than four months and for not more than eight months.

No Trace of Sex.

At this point Mr. Newton took the witness in hand and asked him to be more specific. The professor agreed with counsel that it was impossible for him in any manner to determine the sex from the parts of the body found and examined by him.

This was considered as of great importance to the defense, as it had been generally believed that sufficient evidence would be introduced to establish that the body was that of a woman.

Solicitor Newton suggested that a man specializing in the ear, nose and eye, like Dr. Crippen, would not necessarily be able to separate so adroitly the members of a body, but Professor Peffer thought that such a specialist as counsel described would have a general anatomical knowledge. Miss Leneve showed little interest in Dr. Peffer's testimony. She seemed bored and permitted herself to yawn several times.

Nobody would think that Dr. Crippen's demeanor in court that the gravest of all criminal charges was hanging over his head. He soon recovered his composure after his early uneasiness at Dr. Peffer's testimony to the effect that Mrs. Crippen's murderer must have possessed considerable anatomical knowledge. During the magistrate's absence from the court he joked with his warders and made humorous remarks to Miss Leneve, with the object of cheering her up. She remarked these efforts with a wan smile.

The hearing was then adjourned until Sept. 16.

GAMBLING EXPERT.

Matthews Says He Knows Cards Like English.

"JOINT" IS ENGLISH

So Professor Matthews Says in Narragansett Gambling Case.

Narragansett Pier, R. I., Sept. 15.—Professor Brander Matthews, of Columbia university, proved to be the most vigorous witness of the prosecution when "Doc" William E. Arnold, alleged proprietor of the fashionable Narragansett club, was placed on trial in the Wakefield court on charges of maintaining a gambling place.

Professor Matthews, long known as an expert in simplified spelling, got right down to simplified slang and revealed a knowledge of gambling places and gambling methods that surprised both the wise men of law and the wise people of society who had joined the rush of village folk to hear the testimony.

"I have lived here at the Pier for twenty years," testified Professor Matthews. "The reputation of Clark's block has always been very bad. I have known it always as a gambling joint."

"A—er—what?" inquired Attorney Fitzgerald, for the defense.

"A gambling joint," said Professor Matthews firmly. "I am a professor of English, and I used the word 'joint' with full appreciation of its meaning in this case. A joint is a place where men, drunk or sober, are steered in to lose their money."

Burglars Enter Two Summer Homes Near Providence, R. I.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 15.—Two daring burglars were reported to the police of Providence.

One was at the summer home of Judge Lebaron B. Colt, of the United States circuit court, at Bristol, where more than $15,000 in jewels and money was stolen, and the other at the Knave cottage at Watch Hill, where jewels belonging to Mrs. E. M. Burrill, of Waterbury, Conn., and a Mrs. Thatcher, of Boston, to the value of $10,000, were taken.

No clues were left by the intruders at either place.

Then it occurred to others that the people might appreciate being educated up to this fine cookery, and many books on the culinary art were published and sold well. One of the most noted of these was "The Gourman Almanack," which appeared in 1798.

What a Doomed Man Did

By SALLIE MENDHAM

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

When Ben Wharton was seventeen it was necessary for him to go to work to support a widowed mother and a younger sister. He worked all day and usually most of the night, saving all his mother and sister did not need and investing it. His ambition was to accumulate a competence and then enjoy a world which he considered only enjoyable for those who have plenty of money. When he was twenty-five his mother died, and soon after this his sister married. At thirty-five he found himself in possession of $200,000 and no one to provide for except himself.

Then something happened — he noticed a swelling on his neck. He consulted a physician, who after making an examination said to him:

"Do you wish me to tell you the truth?"

"I certainly do."

"Well, then, what you have on your neck is either a tumor or a cancer. It lies directly over the jugular vein. If it is a cancer it will eat into that vein, and you will bleed to death. If it is a tumor it will so encroach upon the vein as to stop the flow of blood, and you will die from that cause."

Wharton was a philosophic man, and philosophers usually have views of their own. He concluded to spend his money in having a good time while he lived. But he must have a companion to enjoy it with him.

The only person whose company he enjoyed was a Miss Della Thorne. She was poor and was getting to that age where but few women marry. Wharton went to see her and made her the following proposition: "If you will marry me," he said, "and join me in the expenditure of half my fortune you shall have the other half when I die, which the doctor tells me will be in about a year." And he informed her of his condition.

Miss Thorne was a very self-contained young woman. She sat looking at Wharton after this singular proposition for some time without a word, then said that she would take the matter under advisement and in a day or two let him know her decision. This was satisfactory to Ben, who went away and gave that portion of his future no further thought until he received her reply, which was this:

"Accepted on condition that you spend half your fortune within the year, the other half to be settled on me on the day of our marriage."

Ben could understand the last part of this contract, but not the first part. Why should Della stipulate that he should spend what he proposed to spend? But he was bent on carrying out his design.

He did carry out his design, and his wife helped him. His swelling gave him no pain, and the shadow of death that hung over him alone prevented his enjoyment. His wife, whenever she saw that he was under the influence of his expected ending, would propose some new pleasure, and as pleasure usually cost money her husband's share of the fortune rapidly melted. Finally the year was up, and Ben had spent it all.

"What's to be done now, Ben?" asked his wife. "You are still living and no worse physically than when we were married."

"I don't know," said Ben. "Doubtless I have been kept up by having my mind taken off my affliction."

"I think there is a good deal in that," said his wife. "If your share of our fortune has kept you alive a year perhaps my share will keep you alive another year. We will continue our expenditures."

Ben looked at her, astonished. He knew that she would much prefer to live a quiet life, and by this proposition she showed that she would rather have him for another year than the independence guaranteed her at their marriage. He doubted her sincerity.

"Thank you very much for the remaining year," he said.

For a month the expenditures proceeded as before. Ben every day expecting that his wife would call for a reduction. Not a comment escaped her. Then Ben said to her:

"Della, I thought this was a business deal between us."

"So it was on your part."

Ben got up from where he was sitting, went to her and put his arms about her. Presently he said:

"I think I would like to live."

"I wish you could."

"Maybe that doctor was wrong after all."

"I don't know anything about that."

"I think I'll try another."

He did try another and another. Indeed, he tried a number, but they all told him the same story as the first. At last he found a specialist who referred all bodily troubles to one cause. This cause happened to hit Wharton's case. The doctor said that something was dragging him down. If he could be relieved of that something he would have more strength to throw off disease and he might be sufficiently stimulated to throw off the swelling in his neck. Ben's eyes were a bit crooked, and the doctor by an operation straightened them. The swelling disappeared.

"I don't see any connection," said Ben, "between the eyes and a swelling in the neck."

"And I haven't time to explain it to you," replied the doctor. "A thousand dollars, please."

His Little Joke.

"When Harold proposed to me," said Maude, "I told him to go and ask papa."

"But you don't really care for him," said Maude. "Of course not. But I do so love to play little jokes on papa."

The Only Way

Many Gettysburg Citizens Have Discovered It.

Just what to do when the kidneys are affected, is a question that concerns both young and old. Weak kidneys neglected in childhood lead to life-long suffering. People of advanced years with less vitality, suffer doubly. In youth or age, languor, backache, urinary irregularity, dizziness and nervousness make life a burden.

There is one remedy that acts directly on the kidneys and cures these troubles. Doan's Kidney Pills owe their world-wide fame to the fact that they cure sick kidneys and cure them permanently. Follow the example of this Gettysburg citizen and you will be convinced that this is so.

Mrs. Frank Tawney, 28 Breckenridge St., Gettysburg, Pa. says: "Doan's Kidney Pills have been used in my family with excellent results. I publicly endorsed them two years ago and hold just as high an opinion of them at this time. A member of my family was afflicted with kidney trouble for years and probably inherited it. This person suffered a great deal from pains in his back and sides and was unable to control the kidney secretions. A cold always aggravated the complaint. When I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, I procured a box at the People's Drug Store and their use effected a complete cure."

FOUGHT TO A FINISH.

Tiger and Crocodile in a Battle in the Water.

In India a native went to bathe in a ravine. He was in the water up to his neck when a tiger on the hill above gave a leap toward its prey. But the tiger had not calculated that, since his victim was much lower than himself, a leap of the right strength for a horizontal range would carry him far beyond his mark; consequently he fell some ten feet on the other side.

Now, it happened that a hungry crocodile was at the same time drawing a bee line under water toward the native. When the crocodile had almost come upon his prey he heard a splash just in front and made a dash, bringing his enormous jaws down on the tiger's paw.

The bather nearly fainted with fright when he saw the tiger fall into the water, and for a few moments he could not understand why the creature did not devour him. Why did he persist in keeping one of his paws under water, beating savagely with the other? And the water turned red!

Then all at once the assaults of the tiger became more furious, and his growls developed into roars. The huge tail of a crocodile reared up out of the water. The obvious intention was to pull the tiger under water and drown him, and the tiger, understanding this purpose, tried to frustrate it by beating the snout of the crocodile with his other paw. But the snout was too far down, and he left much of his force on the surface of the water. His struggles became more and more feeble, and at length he disappeared altogether, only a cluster of bubbles remaining to show where he had been.

His fight, however, had been a game one, not entirely in vain, for when the bodies of the two beasts finally came to the surface it was seen that the tiger had literally torn away the whole front of the crocodile's face and had blinded it so that its victory was a useless one.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Playing Fair.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. PRIMARIES IN NEW JERSEY

Wilson and Lewis May be Named For Governor.

SAY MURPHY LEADS STOKES

Returns Show That He Will Probably Receive Republican Indorsement for United States Senator.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 15.—Returns from the primary election show that former Governor Franklin Murphy is leading former Governor E. C. Stokes for the Republican indorsement for the United States senatorship to succeed John Keen.

Governor Murphy's vote was heavy in Essex county, which includes the city of Newark, and in Atlantic county. The count is slow, and Stokes' friends believe that final figures will show that Stokes is the winner.

Information from the Fifth congressional district indicates that a majority of the delegates elected to the Republican congressional convention will favor the nomination of Judge William N. Runyon against Congressman Charles N. Fowler, who has been conspicuous in congress as an anti-Canaan man. Mr. Fowler was opposed in the primary by State Treasurer Voorhees and Senator Keen.

The vote in Essex county and in Hudson, which includes Jersey City, was very heavy, and the voters as a rule expressed their preference on the senatorship. This is true of the voting throughout the state except in Camden county, where David Baird, the South Jersey leader, resides. Mr. Baird wants to go to the United States senate, but did not enter the primaries. On this account his supporters in Camden refrained from expressing any choice as between Stokes, Murphy and Congressman Charles N. Fowler.

On the Democratic side the vote was very light and probably does not represent 10 per cent of the Democratic vote in the state. James E. Martine has a decided lead over Frank M. McDermitt for the senatorial endorsement.

Returns from Essex county renominated Congressman R. Wayne Parker, who was opposed in the Republican primaries by Editor Howland, of the Outlook.

Congressman Wiley, another regular Republican in the other Essex district, was also renominated.

The vote in Essex county was decidedly in favor of the regular organizations on both the Republican and the Democratic sides.

In Hudson county Mayor Wittmann, of Jersey City, who wants to be the Democratic candidate for governor, got eighty delegates out of a total of 225.

Democratic State Chairman James R. Nugent, of Newark, declares that Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, will have nearly 1000 votes on the first ballot in the gubernatorial convention. The total vote in the convention is 1400.

The supporters of Frank S. Katzenbach, Jr., in Mercer county dispute the claims of Mr. Nugent and insist that more than 800 of the delegates in the convention will be against Dr. Wilson, and they expect that on the second ballot these votes will concentrate on Mr. Katzenbach. The latter was the unsuccessful candidate for governor at the last state election.

One of the difficulties in the way of making a correct estimate is that outside of Hudson and Essex counties practically all the delegates have been chosen without a contest and without being pledged. There are more than 900 delegates in this category.

Vivian M. Lewis ran ahead in practically all counties, and probably will be nominated for governor by the Republican convention next Tuesday.

NEW $10. NO NEW GOAT

Tragedy When Woman Set Out to Buy a New Hat.

Washington, Sept. 15.—This tale of a goat is arranged chronologically: A woman in Detroit wanted a new hat and drew a $10 bill out of a bank. A gust of wind whisked it out of her hand.

A small boy driving a nanny goat to a cart happened by, and the ten fluttered under nanny's nose.

Nanny gobbled the bill. The woman accused the boy of stealing it.

By the time a policeman arrived the goat had swallowed it.

The boy proved his innocence and recovered the bill by killing nanny.

The treasury department has issued a new bill, but cannot issue a new goat.

Caspar Whitney a Bankrupt.

New York, Sept. 15.—Caspar Whitney, the author, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in the United States district court. He gives his liabilities as $36,157, and his principal unsecured creditor as Robert Bacon, ambassador to France, whose claim amounts to $29,000 for money loaned. Whitney's assets consist of $15 in a bank.

Walsh Worth $6,500,000.

Denver, Colo., Sept. 15.—The estate of Thomas F. Walsh, which had been approximated as high as $100,000,000, is worth only $6,500,000, according to the inventory filed by S. A. Osborn, representing the estate. Of this valuation $3,000,000 is Colorado property.

FALLING BODIES.

Their Velocity Varies According to the Force of Gravity.

A man falling from a three story building in New Orleans will not fall as fast as he would if he were in New York city. In fact, in hardly any two places will he fall with the same speed. This is because as we go toward the equator the force of gravity gets less and less, and consequently the acceleration of a falling body becomes less, and the force of impact is therefore less.

WORKMEN DUG UP POTS OF GOLD

Heirs Sue Contractor to Recover Money.

Bellaire, O., Sept. 15.—A test of the old Blackstonian doctrine of "Botsam and jetsam," the solution of the mysterious disappearance of a fortune and a hard fight for possession of the money and liberty are promised as the result of the arrest here of W. J. McClain, a wealthy contractor of this city, on a charge of stealing about $25,000 unearthing while he was excavating for a building in Wheeling, W. Va.

McClain's find was made on what is known in Wheeling as "the Dr. Schuchart property." Several pots of gold were unearthed by his workmen, and their contents, according to the best information obtainable, totalled $24,124.

When the heirs of Dr. Schuchart heard of the discovery they sought to recover the money. McClain, however, had come to his home in this city. The case was then brought to the attention of the authorities of Ohio county, West Virginia, and an indictment charging the Bellaire man with theft of the gold was returned against him.

McClain is held in jail, awaiting requisition papers from West Virginia. He has indicated an intention to fight not only for his liberty, but also for possession of the gold. The Schuchart heirs claim that their progenitor buried the treasure, and an interesting legal battle is expected.

ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP RUINED

Latest Balloon is Wrecked When Motor E Plodes.

Baden-Baden, Sept. 15.—If anything could discourage the intrepid apostle of aerostatics, Count Zeppelin, it would appear to have been furnished when the Zeppelin VI, the latest model of his aerial invention, was torn by the explosion of one of the three motors located in the stern gondola. Three of the airship's crew were seriously injured.

The accident happened as the dirigible was being slowly worked into her shed. The defective motor had been operating as usual, when suddenly the crew were whirled from their posts in the rear gondola as the craft trembled and lurched.

There was a sharp report, a flash of flames, and in a moment the immense fabric of silk canvas was afire. The crew, hardly realizing what had happened, tumbled over the sides of the airship, barely escaping with their lives. The fire spread so rapidly that the shed was soon destroyed.

This is the fifth serious accident that has befallen the Zeppelin dirigibles, the histories of which have been brilliant, but brief, usually ending in disaster.

MARY MANNERING ILL

Actress is Recovering From an Operation For Appendicitis.

New York, Sept. 15.—Miss Mary Manning, the actress, who was operated upon at the Roosevelt hospital for appendicitis, is recovering from the effects of the operation.

It is said at the hospital that Miss Manning's condition is favorable and that a speedy convalescence is being looked for.

Blown Ashore by Dynamite.

Kittanning, Pa., Sept. 15.—Setting off dynamite in an attempt to recover a drowned body, James Leonard and Frank Guggins were blown ashore with their skull and both are in the hospital with serious bruises. The men had thrown a stick of the explosive a short distance ahead of the boat, which drifted over the dynamite just as it let go. Boat and men were hurled thirty feet through the air. The body was not recovered.

comes less, and the force of impact is therefore less.

While it does not make very much difference in the injury to a person falling from a height, it does make a difference in other things. Take a rifle and fire it exactly horizontally, and if the gun is sixteen feet above the ground, say, at New York the bullet fired from such a rifle will strike the ground in exactly one second after it leaves the rifle. If the bullet has a horizontal velocity of 1,000 feet per second it will strike the earth exactly

ROOSEVELT WILL WRITE PLATFORM

Reynolds to Assist in Drawing Labor Plank.

COLONEL DENIES RUMOR

Will Not Be Forced Into Accepting State Chairmanship in New York or Any Other Office.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 15.—The planks of the Republican state platform will bear very distinct evidence of Sagamore Hill's carpenter work, if the plans of Colonel Roosevelt mature.

James B. Reynolds, investigator extraordinary for the colonel in times past, and ever his admirer, came down to talk over labor matters in general and what the Republicans will have to promise later in the platform in particular. The two were in consultation for the greater part of the morning, but the colonel did not care to go into the details of their talk. He simply said in an off-hand manner, as though it were an accepted fact that the platform would have progressive leanings, and that they discussed what to put into the labor plank.

Also Mr. Roosevelt silenced for the time being all talk of his running for governor this fall. He told inquirers that he could say nothing additional to what he had said on his return from Europe and repeated in dozens of letters since that time, and that was that under no circumstances could he accept the gubernatorial nomination. The same statement, he added, applied to the chairmanship of the state committee. He lapsed into silence, however, when questioned as to the possibility of his becoming temporary chairman of the state convention.

When Mr. Reynolds had gone on his way Mr. Roosevelt referred to the results of the primaries, which apparently he had foreseen, since he said: "I am naturally gratified. It is no less than I expected."

Some one bobbed up with the information that Miles Poindexter, of Spokane, an insurgent leader in the house, had defeated the old guard for senatorial nomination in the state of Washington to the tune of 40,000 plurality. The colonel rubbed his hands together delightedly, and he decided right away to make a statement, and here it is:

"Just as in South Dakota where the regulars won, I urged their opponents to support the winners heartily, so I must earnestly urge that the progressives in the state of Washington be given the hearty support of the regulars there."

SWINDLER ARRESTED

Made Heavy Loans at Banks by False Statements of Credit.

New York, Sept. 15.—Adolph Rothbarth, representative in America of the largest hop dealing firm in the world, Rothbarth & Co., of Frankfort-on-the-Main, London, St. Petersburg and New York, is in the Tombs, a confessed bank swindler.

His victims were the Mercantile National bank, which, according to the district attorney's office, is out $58,000, and the Liberty National bank, which holds $75,000 of his fraudulent notes.

After twenty years of honorable dealing as the New York agent of a firm whose credit is international, Rothbarth in 1905 made up his mind that he wanted to be a millionaire and get his million quick. He adventured into Wall street, played the bull end of the market, put up for margins the cash that he had obtained from the banks on the strength of impeccable business statements, and was ruined in the panic of 1907.

Thereafter he played a confidence game with three banks, the Mercantile, the Liberty and the National Park, keeping each institution ignorant of his borrowing from the others and floating his hop business with the proceeds of false statements of credit and cash.

Thugs Rob Aged Woman.

Columbus, O., Sept. 15.—Mrs. Lucinda Miller, a widow, aged eighty-two years, living alone at Taylor's Station, near here, awoke and found two robbers at her bedside. They bound her with ropes and searched the house, but found only $9. The woman after they left attempted to get out to alarm the neighbors and fell, breaking her ankle. She crawled to a neighbor's house and awoke the occupants. The robbers escaped.

Sailor's Alleged Mutilators Held.

New York, Sept. 15.—John Meyers, Robert Cochrane and Michael Kane, who were arrested here, charged with assault upon a sailor who was beaten up in Buffalo and whose right ear was severed and sent in a bottle to President Coublay, of the Pittsburgh Steamship company, were arraigned in police court. Kane was discharged, but the others were held in $3000 bail each for examination.

One Killed, Six Injured, In Explosion.

Linton, Ind., Sept. 15.—One miner is dead, one is fatally injured and five were seriously hurt as the result of a gas explosion caused by a miner's lamp in the Vandallia mine No. 10, 300 miles from Linton. There were 300 men working in the mine, but they had been changed to another section

1,000 feet away. Let us take the same ride to a place where the force of gravity is not the same as at New York, but a good deal smaller. We find that if the gun is placed sixteen feet above the ground, as before, and absolutely horizontal the bullet will not fall the sixteen feet in one second, but will take over one and a half seconds to fall, thus enabling the length of time in the air during that length of time. Therefore it will strike the ground about 1,000 feet away. Thus it is seen

THOROUGH HOUSECLEANING NECESSARY.

Upon whom shall fall the honor of inventing a vacuum cleaner to renovate the roosters' residence?

Here is the sprayer for whitewashing, there is the louse machine to kill the Biddy bugs, but, oh, you nasty droppings, dusty litter and foul floor! But we can't always live on Easy street, yet we can simplify the dirty part of our chicken housecleaning by doing more cleaning as we go along, using movable roosts and nests, fighting vermin every day and laying solid, ratproof, concrete floors. When we spray lime it means the whole interior white, concrete floors and all, the nests and roosts being sprayed outside. Some make an excellent job of it, with one exception—they don't remove the filthy dirt floor as deep as it is rank and renew with new, sweet soil.

This explains much winter sickness. An exchange of sweet garden soil for sick henhouse soil is easy and a benefit to both. Some clean everything up-top but the chickens.

The chickens? Yes, and a man's foolish to get lime in his eye destroying vermin in the house if he allows a lousy flock to return to fill the clean coop with crawlers.

Four dollars is a small price for a louse machine that cleans a flock quickly and saves its price soon in economy of time, labor and powder.

Some still stuff the ceiling for warmth, with straw and forget to renew it year after year. What a fine residence for disease germs and hanging palace for mites and ticks! Vermin implies rats and mice. These should be destroyed.

Removing fifth also implies thorough disinfection. This is surely accomplished inside by spraying with lime, a five dollar machine, as shown, doing the work perfectly.

But with all our thorough work inside it will be a failure if the yards outside are bare, foul and sodden with germs, for the fowls will simply bear bacteria back into the clean building and make it a pesthole.

The yards made sanitary, the value of this complete cleaning will be seen in the health of the flocks and in increased profit.

DON'TS.

Don't feed dry bones as part of the ration. It does quite well for shell; otherwise a sell.

Don't feed pork cracklings with the idea that they are meat. They are simply greasy, salty fiber.

Don't feed new wheat at first heavy and alone, and be moderate in first feeding fresh cut bone.

Don't let turkey poulters have corn till they "shoot the red," and beware of soggy meat and bread.

Don't use beef scrap that is lumpy and gray and smells like fertilizer. It's a chick paralyzer.

Don't compete at shows simply to down some fellow. He who hates in this age should be kept in a cage.

that the range of a rifle is increased as it is taken toward the equator.

Of course there is no place on the earth where the force of gravity is two-thirds smaller than at New York, but there are many places where the difference is considerable enough to affect slightly the range of rifles.—Harper's Weekly.

"Time's Flight Turned Backward" SAGE AND SULPHUR

Made Her Look Twenty Years Younger

Read Mrs. Herrick's Sworn Statement

STATE OF NEW YORK,
COUNTY OF MONROE, ss: ROCHSTER, N. Y.
Nancy A. Herrick, being duly sworn, deposes and says: When I was a girl, I had a head of heavy, long dark brown hair which was the envy of my school mates, and which attracted the attention and remarks of strangers. As I grew older, my hair commenced to come out, just a little at first, but gradually more and more, and then began to turn gray. I was induced by the many good reports I had heard of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy to try a bottle. My hair was quite thin and gray when I began using Sage and Sulphur, and you can imagine my satisfaction when I found that it was fast coming back to its natural condition, being thicker, darker, and more glossy than it had been for a long time. I continued to use Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is now as heavy, dark and smooth as when I was a girl of sixteen. It is now four years since I commenced using Sage and Sulphur, and my hair is still in splendid condition.

Sworn to before me this 15th day of Sept. 1907.

OLD FAMILIES.

Some in Europe and in the Orient That Are Really Ancient.

In Great Britain, and on the continent those families pride themselves that count their ancestry through ten generations, but their claims to really ancient lineage seem insignificant when compared with those of certain houses in the Orient.

We read that the oldest family in Great Britain, the Mar family in Scotland, may trace its pedigree to 1003. Then, too, we have the Campbells of Argyll, whose date is put down at 1190. The Grosvenor family, that of the Duke of Westminster, refers its origin to the same year that the Conqueror "came over"—i. e., 1066. The Austrian house of Hapsburg goes back farther than that, its date being 962, while the Bourbons proudly mention 864 as the date of their origin.

But none of them is to be mentioned in the same breath with the emperor of Japan, whose office has been filled by members of his family for a period of over 2,500 years, the present ruler being the one hundred and twenty second in the line. The first emperor of Japan sat on the throne about the time when Nebuchadnezzar was flourishing—that is, in 605 B. C.

Another oriental branch, the descendants of Mohammed, presents claims not to be dismissed. The prophet was born in 570, and a list of his descendants has been carefully retained, being duly set forth in a volume kept in Mecca. Little or no doubt exists of the authenticity of the long list of names of Mohammed's descendants as registered in this sacred book.—Harper's Weekly.

WANTED NO FUSS.

Any Old Thing Would Do For Dinner, So She Said. Mrs. Betsy Baxter was the last person in the world to want anybody to make trouble on her account. When she "dropped in" on Mrs. Doolittle unexpectedly for dinner one day she made her position on this point quite clear. "Don't you go to a mile of bother on my account Mrs. Doolittle. You know that I'm a person for whom you can just lay down an extra plate and set before me anything you happen to have in the house."

"If you just try a chicken same as you would for your own folks, an' make up a pan o' your tea biscuits that no one can beat an open glass o' your red currant jelly, an' have a dish o' your curant preserves, an' some o' the pound cake you most always have in your cake jar, you do that, an' have some piping hot apple fritters with hot maple sirup to go with 'em, an' some o' your good coffee, an' any vegetables you happen to have in the house—I like sweet potatoes the way you fix 'em mighty—but, ha, just have anything else you happen to have."

"I'm one that expects an' is willing to eat what's set before me, an' no questions asked nor fault found when I go visiting. So don't you put your self out a mile for me. If you have what I've mentioned an' anything else you want to have I'll be satisfied. I ain't one that cares very much about what I eat anyhow. As the saying is 'any old thing' will do for me."—Puck

JUVENILE BLOCKHEADS.

Stupid Boys Who Developed into World Famous Men.

There is quite a long record of famous men who in their boyhood were regarded as fools and dullards. Sir Walter Scott was called a "blockhead" by his mother. The mother of Brinsley Sheridan despaired of teaching him the simplest elements. Her death aroused him to activity and he became a scholar, philosopher, poet, wit, statesman and orator. Dean Swift, the keenest wit of his age, was "plucked" at Dublin university. Newton, Shakespeare, Michelangelo and Oliver Goldsmith all come in the category.

One day a slatternly woman rushed out of a little grocery shop gripping an unkempt boy by the ear, and as she pulled him along she shouted to her neighbor:

"My heart is fairly broke with that brat, Tammy, and he is so stupid he can learn nothin'!"

That stupid brat Tammy became the poet Tom Moore.

In a country schoolhouse in Queen's county, Ireland, a boy with a blunt knife cut in the desk "A. W." the initials of his name. The teacher, who caught him in the act, cried out:

"Stupid, you are better at cutting letters and destroying desks than you are at learning your lessons!"

That boy was Arthur Wellesley, known to fame as the Duke of Wellington, hero of Waterloo.

In the middle years of the last century, in St. Malachy's college, Belfast, a boy carved the letters "C. R." in the wood. The French professor reported him and declared that he "was besides a worthless boy, who would never amount to anything."

"I will amount to more than you!" returned the youth.

He did, for he became lord chancellor of England—Lord Russell of Kilgoburn.—London Graphic.

The Nameless Yacht

A Case of Mystery of the Sea

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

There have been two cases of ships discovered in good condition, but deserted by their crews. One was found on the open sea under sail, the other at anchor on a coast. These two are all that thus far have been recorded.

It remains for me to record a third. I am a gentleman of leisure given to yachting. I am fond of cruising on my yacht either with a party of friends or a single male companion. During the last season I started from the New York Yacht club's dock at New York for a cruise eastward along the coast. I put in at several places on the route—New London, Marblehead, Portland and other ports—for fresh table supplies, then steamed on, intending to enter the St. Lawrence river and visit the Thousand Islands.

We met a number of yachts, for it was in the season, and yachtsmen are prone in hot weather to occupy the cooler regions of the northeastern coast. One evening while steaming across one of those beautiful bays that indent the rocky coast of Maine we saw near the shore a steam yacht riding at anchor within a cable's length of the shore.

Alec Wingate was with me on this cruise. Alec was the son of a British baronet and had domestic troubles. He had married the daughter of a colonel in the English army, a very beautiful girl, who, after a couple of years of married life during which she and her husband had lived very happily together, suddenly disappeared. Whether she had been kidnapped or had gone off with a lover no one could tell. There was no evidence, at least none that any one had ever got hold of, to point in either of these directions. The only other theory was that she had been murdered. Wingate had hunted for her all over the world and had come to America for the purpose. I had met him and, having taken a liking to him, begged him to divert his mind from his loss by going on a cruise with me.

Our course lay near enough to the anchored yacht to enable us to see with glasses what she was; that is, we could have seen any flags, people or other distinguishing marks. But there were neither people nor flags. She was a steamer yacht, but no smoke was being emitted from her stack. Her stern was at one time toward us, and what was my astonishment to see no name on her.

We slowed up, expecting every minute to see some one appear on the deck, but after waiting half an hour without any one appearing it began to look as if either a party had gone ashore from her for some purpose or she had been deserted. The first of these theories was not very likely correct. In the first place at least one member of the crew would have been left in charge, and in the second this was a perfectly wild coast, and there could be no object for any party to go ashore unless for water.

I gave orders to steam up alongside the nameless yacht. The hour was about 7 in the evening, and a fine dinner was set in the cabin. A fire was burning in the galley. Every boat belonging to the yacht was in its place. In the lockers in the after part of the vessel were articles of male and female wearing apparel, the latter indicating that ladies had been aboard.

And here the mystery changes from those sea secrets I have mentioned, or, rather, another mystery is added. Alec Wingate recognized a dress contained in a rosewood locker as one that had belonged to his wife. He at once became wild with varying emotions. There was pleasure at this evidence that his wife at least had been recently alive. There was bitterness lest she might have been living on this yacht with a paramour. There was fear lest though she had so recently lived, she had met with some misfortune.

To allay this excitement I told Wingate that he might easily be mistaken in the dress. But he said that it was the one in which he had most liked to see his wife arrayed and the only one of her wardrobe that he would surely recognize.

We went through the yacht from stem to stern looking for some explanation of the mystery. Every stateroom, every receptacle, was ransacked. The firebox door stood partly open, and I looked in to see if materials had been put in to light a new fire. The old fire was still smoldering. The only thing we discovered was that the yacht had undoubtedly been made in England. All the maker's marks on the finishing and furniture were English. The upholsterer had been purchased of a well known upholsterer in London.

Having satisfied ourselves that there was no one aboard, we left "the nameless" and returned to our own vessel. I induced Wingate to sit down to dinner—he would eat nothing—and discuss the matter. He wanted to go ashore the next day and search the coast. This seemed to me a useless expenditure of time. I had come out for a cruise and did not like the prospect of waiting while a search party beat the beach in a desolate country where there was nothing but wild moose or caribou. But Wingate suggested that the party on "the nameless" might have gone ashore for hunting purposes, and I at last consented that the next day he might take three of the crew, go ashore and spend twelve hours in looking for the deserters of the yacht.

But overnight something occurred to render this inadvisable. We set a light on "the nameless" and left one man to watch on our own vessel, which was all that was necessary since we were at anchor in a small bay in good weather. One man watched till eight bells, midnight, when another man took his place. Wingate wished me to put a man on "the nameless," and I did.

At two bells in the morning Wingate, who had slept little during the night, looked out of the porthole in his stateroom for the yacht. Not seeing her and supposing that he was not on the right side to see her, he got up and went on deck. "The nameless" was nowhere to be seen. He came to my room to announce the fact. I asked him what the watch reported about the disappearance, and he said that he had found the man sound asleep.

Putting on a bath robe, I went on deck. The first watch said that "the nameless" was in position when he was relieved, so she must have pulled out during the second watch. I asked if anything was known of the man who had been stationed on her, but was told that he had neither been heard of nor seen since he had been put aboard. He had disappeared with the mysterious vessel.

Among my crew there were several ignorant, superstitious men—sailors of low rating—who were paralyzed with terror. They rushed without orders to pull up the anchor, but I stopped them, though I feared they were going to brain me with captain bars they had taken up. I didn't propose to take any action till I had received further information and had consulted with my guest, Alec Wingate. One of my men said that during the night he thought he heard the sound of oars.

Wingate was very much agitated over this part of the mystery. Indeed, he seemed more disturbed at the disappearance than he had been at the discovery of the yacht. I suggested that he make a reconnoitering trip ashore, as had been intended, but with a different purpose. He might find traces of people having been there. He followed my advice, but the keenest eye in the party could discover no indications of human beings. For my part I believed "the nameless" had been taken possession of by shore desperadoes; that they had been in hiding somewhere near by; had gone aboard in the night, surprised the man on watch, killed him and towed the yacht out of our hearing with muffled oars; then they had lighted the fires and steamed away. There was nothing against this theory except the fact of Wingate's having found one of his wife's dresses aboard. But I took no stock in this, for Wingate had suffered so much at her loss that probably his mind had become afflicted and he had himself created the remembrance of this dress.

After consultation with Wingate, whom I told that I would adopt any course he wished, it was determined that we get up the anchor immediately and go out to the open sea with a view to discovering if "the nameless" was in sight. This we did, running directly southeast in a direct line from the coast, but notwithstanding that we had a clean sweep either way and excellent glasses we saw nothing of her. I believed she had got too much start, but nearly all of my crew by this time considered her a phantom.

Nor did we afterward hear anything of her, though we spoke every vessel we met, asking if she had been seen. One vessel described her pretty well, but the yacht observed was the Acadia, with the name painted on her stern. We completed our voyage without any other information.

But the mystery of "the nameless" was destined to be solved. During the winter Wingate got wind of his wife's being in Montreal. He went there and found her.

Though the story of her disappearance was never made entirely clear to me, the mystery of the nameless yacht was. To keep Mrs. Wingate from testifying in litigation where British people in high life were concerned she had been kidnapped and kept at sea in a yacht. Her kidnaper while on the New England coast saw by a New York society paper that her husband had embarked on a cruise with me. As soon as my yacht appeared his sailing master recognized her. At the time a leak in the boilers was being repaired, and there was no heat in the firebox, so the yacht could not steam away.

The kidnaper, supposing Wingate knew that his wife was on the Acadia and that he was on her track, ordered a paint brush to be run over her painting.

An idea occurred to him. There was at the time no one aboard but himself, an engineer and his captive. He dragged the captive, carried her into the firebox and got in there with her. The engineer got in also, and the party, two on one side of the door and one on the other, were hidden from view of any one looking straight into the box, especially as there was very little light there. They all stayed in this concealment until we left the yacht and returned there when we put our watch aboard. During the night they surprised, gagged and tied him; then, having cut the cable, the two then got in the dingy and with muffled oars pulled out of hearing. To get up steam and speed away was the next move. The Acadia, being one of the fastest English yachts, was soon at a safe distance.

WORRY DOES KILL.

It Slowly but Surely Destroys the Cells of the Brain.

Modern science has brought to light nothing more curiously interesting than that worry will kill. More remarkable still, it has been able to determine just how worry does kill.

It is believed by many scientists who have followed carefully the growth of the science of brain diseases that scores of the deaths set down to their causes are due to worry and that alone. The theory is a simple one, so simple that any one can readily understand it.

Briefly put, it amounts to this: Worry injures beyond repair certain cells of the brain, and the brain being the nutritive center of the body, the other organs become gradually injured, and when some diseases of these organs or a combination of them arises death finally ensues.

Thus worry kills. Insidiously, like many other diseases, it creeps upon the brain in the form of a single, constant, never lost idea, and as a dropping of water over a period of years will wear a groove in the stone, so does worry gradually, imperceptibly and no less surely destroy the brain cells that lead all the rest, which are, so to speak, the commanding officers of mental power, health and motion.

Worry, to make the theory still stronger, is an irritant at certain points, which produces little harm if it comes at intervals or is regularly. Occasional worryment though it can cope with, but the irritation and the reiteration of one idea of a disquieting sort the cells of the brain are not proof against.

It is as if the skull were laid bare and the surface of the brain struck lightly with a hammer every few seconds with mechanical precision, with never a sign of a stop or the failure of a stroke. Just in this way does the annoying idea, the maddening thought that will not be done away with, strike or fall upon certain nerve cells, never ceasing, diminishing the vitality of the delicate organisms that are so minute that they can be seen only under the microscope.—Journal of Physiological Therapeutics.

Peculiarities of Lichens.

The lichen is remarkable for the great age to which it lives, there being good grounds for believing that the plants endure for 100 years. Their growth is exceedingly slow, almost beyond belief, indicating that only a little nourishment is necessary to keep them alive. In a dry time they have the power to suspend growth altogether, renewing it again at the fall of rain. This peculiarity alone is enough to make the lichen a vegetable wonder, as it is a property possessed by no other species of plant. Another interesting fact about lichens is that they grow only where the air is free from dust and smoke. They may be said to be a sure indication of the purity of the air, as they are never found growing in cities and towns where the atmosphere is impregnated with dust, soot, smoke and other impurities.
